

Twain and Cable.

To the reading public, Mark Twain needs no introduction. George W. Cable, although not so long known, has gained a wonderful prestige by his altogether unique sketches. Mark Twain is doubtless the best living humorist, and as enjoyable as are his writings, his lectures and talks are irresistible. To the special efforts of Col. Ingraham, chairman of the Athenæum executive committee, more than to anything else, are due the presence of Messrs. Twain and Cable in Saratoga, at this time. It is safe to say that the Town Hall will be filled with a delighted audience to-morrow evening.
