

The students' lecture association come before their friends this week with an entertainment that is at once unique and novel. On Friday evening, Dec. 12th, Mark Twain and Geo. W. Cable will appear at university hall, where they will render passages from their own works. We feel sure that the mere mention of their names will draw a full house. We congratulate the association on having secured the services of two such noted authors. It is in fact two entertainments in one, and each of the highest order. Those who want to laugh as they never laughed before (unless they have heard Twain) would do well to attend. As a reader of his own skilfully delineated characters Mr. Cable, perhaps, stands without a rival.
